

Culinary delights of KOBE

Waterfront
Port of Kobe has developed as hub for the shipping network from the world to Asia since its opening. Many ships come and go at the waterfront that extends east and west alongside Kobe.

Nunobiki Falls

Selected as one of Japan's best 100 waterfalls, Nunobiki Falls consists of four falls: Ontaki, Meniaki, Meotodaki and Tsutsumigadaki. Ontaki is especially famous, with a majestic height of 43m. It is located behind the Shin-Kobe Shinkansen station and it is a popular destination for taking a stroll on the path ways.

Sake (Nada Gogo)

Nada Gogo was a suitable location for high-quality sake production because Yamada Nishiki rice appropriate for sake-making was grown in the nearby Banshu Plains, and it was blessed with good water called "Miyamizu." Now it is the best-reowned sake-producing district in Japan, and "Nada no Sake" is beloved nationwide.

Kobe Sweets

Western sweets were first made in Kobe by residents of the foreign settlements, sailors and travelers. In 1897, Japanese opened a western sweets shop in Motomachi. Kobe artisans innovated on the advanced techniques brought by foreign pâtisseries, and Western sweets shops opened in Kobe one after another.

Coffee

Coffee, a necessity for Western people, began importing along with the opening of the Port of Kobe, and a roasting industry gradually developed. In 1878, a coffee house appeared in the international Motomachi neighborhood.

Bread

Bakeries already existed in the late 19th century because many foreigners lived in Kobe, similar to sweets and coffee. Kobe's bread consumption volume is top-level nationwide, and delicious bakeries are dotted throughout the city.

Kobe Beef Official Restaurant Guide and Map

KOBE Beef

Welcome to the World of Kobe Beef

1. CLASSIFICATION

No cow comes into this world and begins its life as Kobe Beef. Even among "Tajima-gyu" cows, only the chosen few that satisfy specific quality criteria deserve the title "Kobe Beef".

2. ORIGIN

What affects the meat quality of beef above all else is its lineage. Tajima-gyu cows originally came from Tajima, a mountainous region with few open fields facing the Sea of Japan. Tajima-gyu is regarded as the pinnacle of even the Japanese Black domestic breeds of Wagyu cattle of which only a few now exist, and is used as the "motoushi" or purebred seedstock cattle in the breeding of Wagyu cattle nationwide.

3. FLAVOR

The deliciousness of Kobe Beef is also scientifically proved

This fine, delicate meat has a high degree of fat marbling that melts at low temperatures.

This meat has tender fibers and its own, unique refined sweetness.

Lean meat
Flavor components
Kobe beef is rich in oleic acids which determine the taste of fat and the flavor component inosinic acid.
